THE LEADERS OF THE DEMOCRATIC LEADERS.

The two papers of the rebel archives which have already been published contain the most painful and palpable proof that many of the principal leaders of the Democratic party in the North were in treasonable correspondence with the enemy during the war, and that they were privy to and actively aided the Confederate schemes that it was hoped would crumble Mr. Lincoln's administration, causing it to make up its mind to re-elect him.

Under his re-election impossible.

Thompson, in his report printed a few days ago, told Benjamin, the Confederate Secre tary of State, that on his arrival in Canada in 1865 he heard that there was an organiza tion known as the Sons of Liberty, whose ob jects and principles he learned "without much difficulty or delay." They are de scribed to have been political: "its organiza tion was essentially military; it had its com manders of divisions, of brigades, of regi ments, of companies.

The specious plea upon which they are en deavoring to get into power is that the coun try is tired of the war, and that it is time to shake hands across the bloody chasm.

Their war record is the same as that of the Democratic leaders, laying their plans to seize and hold them.

A general council was held, a day or a simultaneous uprising was appointed, and McDonald, who was then running for Gov ernor of Indiana, was informed of the entire plot. He, believing that it would interfere with his election in the language of Thom pson, "threatened to expose all the parties engaged unless the project was abandoned."

Here, then, we have the facts established that in 1864, while the Government was straining every nerve to put down treason in the field, the society of "sons of liberty" was established in the northern States of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio could be set up under his re-election impossible.
